On December 18, 2024, prosecutor Alessandro Gobbis requested a trial on charges of involuntary manslaughter against the two security guards who intervened to restrain the man in front of Sky's headquarters in Rogoredo during the night between August 19 and 20 of last year.

Giovanni Sala, 34, died of a heart attack after being restrained by the security guards outside Sky's headquarters in Rogoredo, in the southern outskirts of Milan, in the summer of 2023.

According to the investigation, Giovanni Sala was tackled and held to the ground by the two guards, with a knee on his back, for more than a minute.
